Since we just had green salts for Christmas, how about clover and all other LEAF SHAPED open salts?

This pedestal is noted in an early Metz book, possibly a loaf sugar. 3 1/4" bowl rim, but it has leaves!

Debi, of course you would have the blue one.

I have only ever seen two cobalt like this in my life and I bought them both. I have since sold one that had the leaf base. I thought this was a more unusual base so I kept this one. I think the light blue glass one has a leaf base too. I'll have to see if I have a picture of mine already taken.

How about if we do egg shapes and bunnies for April (Easter themes), and get into flowers for May?

Wow! The farthest ahead I ever got on these topics was the night before and now we have March, April and May all lined up!

Will post pictures of nice hand made leaf salt. All the pieces have a wire embeded in them and then the total piece has been put together and the wrapped. The larger flower salt bowl and the small flowers are white opalescent glass and the three leaves are clear glass. Am posting 3 pictures from different directions, was hard to get a true picture of the colors. Also a leaf with the 3 loop salt.

Ed, the leaf salt with flowers on wires looks like work I see here in Chinatown, very elaborate pieces some of them with flowers I thought were carved from jade-like material, obviously not real jade. Do you know who made yours? Perhaps the Chinese pieces were the inspiration for the glass work.

Nancy

Have no idea as to where and when made. A dealer that I know is always looking for open salts for me and she found this one.

Don bought them for me 2 Christmas' ago. We searched online for Michael Michaud. He also does salts with spoons that are shell shapes. They are layered copper, gold, or silver over bronze or pewter. They are new but so well done and reasonably priced from $30 to $45. I understand that many museum stores sell them. We got them from an online store named Sativa and were very pleased.
