I believe both of these are actually mustards without lids. See the cruet set on this old catalog page:
http://www.cornishware.biz/html/cornishware\_brochure.html

The only true open salt in Cornishware I've ever seen was a table salt size and was being sold with other pieces. I couldn't get the seller to split up the pieces. It was also rather expensive and is a rarer piece in Cornishware.

I do not currently have pictures taken of them, but there's also some salt club anniversary salts that are striped. And I have some colored eucre star shaped salts too. I do have one more that I am very proud of. Picture to follow.

Not sure if this next picture will be too fuzzy, it is a pressed glass set with stars and fine cut (screen).
