December 2012

Bright and shiny objects can put you in a trance and things that glisten are seen around Christmas time. Let's post any silver, gold, or brass salts we have, (even if they aren't quite bright & shiny right now). Mercury glass can be included. We've recently had silver with liners so let's try to stick with silver without liners unless it's something pretty special or seldom seen. As an extra, let's also show off any salts we got for Christmas after the 25th. That should help along the final week that's usually pretty quiet on this page!

1 Debi Raitz★ 12-01-2012 03:28 AM ET (US) IP: 24.192.249.13	I know many of you will be busy this month, but hopefully you'll find some "me" time to add a few pictures from your collections. Hope to see some of the "lurkers" post a picture or two also. Don't leave out some special ones if they are in need of cleaning. We all have those. Just post them so we can see some of the great silver, gold, brass and mercury glass salts out there. Debi

In England I was told I might have been a magpie in a former life because I like shiny things. Magpies are known to steal shiny object and hoard them in their nests. Does that sound like salt collectors? Nancy V

That picture was actually taken a long time ago. I think I've cleaned it once since then, and it's in dire need of another now. I'll try to post one picture per day and see how quickly I run out of silver salts. Debi

91 Nancy Villaverde 12-26-2012 02:29 PM ET (US) IP: 75.80.210.216	Debi, love the Christmas decorations. I always like the ways you find to dress up the signature SALT. I've had one of the #83 for a long time, love the elegant shape. Wouldn't a whole table set with these look great? Christmas where the snow never falls. Nancy V

You identified yours as Indian sterling; but I can't find any marks on this set? Is yours marked? Just wondered if anyone else had this set as well? Really like the set; can't wait to clean it up a little tonight:) Susie

95 Debi Raitz★ 12-27-2012 06:41 PM ET (US) IP: 24.192.249.13	Susie: I have just the salt and spoon, no pepper shaker. There are three tiny dots in the center bottom, but it's probably a tool mark rather than a maker's mark because I can't find it anywhere. Debi
96 Susie P 12-27-2012 06:50 PM ET (US) IP: 166.137.100.25	Thanks Nancy D and Jane! I was so tickled; and then I remembered it was also good for this Month's topic, yeah! Thanks also Debi; I forgot to bring this home today, so will check first thing tomorrow; polishing will have to wait, LOL!!

97 Nancy Villaverde 12-27-2012 10:54 PM ET (US) IP: 75.80.211.87	Yes, Susie, I think yours are a match with mine. I just checked again, and I can't see any mark on mine. I judged NA from the pattern, but it's possible that they are Mexican. Actually, I think Mexican silver is more likely to be marked, but I'm no expert on any silver. Nancy V

This is another side of the same salt. All panels have some kind of plant on them.

Just wanted to thank everyone for sharing your pretties this month - Nancy D - I am not into Mercury glass salts - but did find myself with a bit of liquid running down my chin looking at yours - Very Nice !! And Debi - May I stay true to some form and do my final post as you should know I would - Your Chicken needs to come to the west - Truly truly it does - As my great grandson would say - "MINE" -- m

Nancy D: Your silver salts definitely look Oriental. The larger one has more of a spittoon rim. I think the leaves are bamboo. You may have to repost these in a couple days when we have the topic of unmarked and/or unidentified.
Mary: I just watched Finding Nemo on TV again a couple weeks ago. I think the funniest scenes are all the seagulls saying "Mine! Mine! Mine!" when they see potential food. It's really a cute, clever movie for kids and adults. Unfortunately (for you, not me), the blue and white chicken is roosting in my kitchen and not going anywhere. I wouldn't mind a warmer climate and snow-free zone though! Now that the New Year is upon us, all I can say is "C'MON SPRING!"
Debi
