I wouldn't have thought of the dogs on Doulton and Wedgwood, Inez! Clever girl.

| 24 Nancy Villaverde 07-31-2012 09:51 PM ET (US) IP: 67.49.155.62 | I like live cats, don't usually collect things with cat images, but I love both of mine. I've never seen another glass one with the frosted cat. At the Mega Glass Convention in the fall of 2011 in Overland Park, the table next to mine was Monroe and Wavecrest glass. They were selling an interesting reproduction of an old catalog, and a shaker is pictured with a cat on it. They had a few shakers on their table with cats but they are much rarer than the floral designs. I can't believe I bought mine in a scruffy little flea market for $2.40. It was $3 but I got 20% off. Possibly my best buy ever. Nancy V |

| 29 Debi Raitz★ 08-01-2012 09:30 PM ET (US) IP: 24.192.249.13 |  Probably not a salt. The inside of the bowl is flat so it most likely held something. Perhaps a perfume or some other small bottle. |
| 30 Nancy Villaverde 08-02-2012 06:05 PM ET (US) IP: 75.80.213.214 | Love the black dog, Debi. I think some holders were made for perfumes but I'd call him a salt. The little blue doggie looks like the ones on the oval pressed salts, even the thing around his neck. I thought he might have been glued onto the intaglio, but there seems to be a pedestal there designed for him. |
| 31 Debi Raitz★ 08-02-2012 08:29 PM ET (US) IP: 24.192.249.13 | The picture is misleading. There isn't a raised area for the dog but it is an elongated area for the dog to sit. I think mine is Czech and I think Susie's is by Westmoreland. Westmoreland's trademark item has always been that little bulldog. Mine isn't exactly the same, but someone copied someone. Maybe the closeup of the dog I have shows it |

Our two boys were both strays dumped out here at the lake; but they know where to come for a meal, then to stay! We love our boys dearly; Mr. Tabby is 15 and elderly; my lap cat, Henry is our chubby youngster; and can't abide being held, but wants to lay right next to you! :) :) First pic is Mr. Tabby

The first of many of my greyhound salt pictures - will add the rest tomorrow - this is a test to see if I can add pics. These are almost identical - the top one is a bit more frosted. Got the first one in 1989 when Nina emailed to tell me about it being listed on eBay. Got the second one about a year ago on eBay - can never have enough greyhound salts! Yeah - it worked!

Okay - now I've got it - one more before i head to bed. This one came via a headsup from Sandy Jzyk who called me to tell me she saw it at a horse show with her sister. The price was right and I agreed to have her sister buy it for me - I had no idea what it looked like but I trusted Sandy's judgement. It is bigger than regular intaglios and the paint is in great shape. Thanks, Sandy!

But numbers 131 and 132 are SO ermines as Debi suggested! You and Dave don't need to be told that there are no short legged greyhounds. Ones that appear to be so are called dachshunds. (badger hounds, can't spell it and the spell check isn't presenting me the correct spelling on this site!) Nancy V |

| 142 Debi Raitz★ 08-28-2012 08:14 PM ET (US) IP: 24.192.249.13 | Donna: Your salts resemble greys a great deal, so I wouldn't worry about including them in your grey salt collection. The head shape is what matters most, in my opinion. You should check those holders for marks. Perhaps they are French. Thanks a bunch, Mary. I haven't had a Girl Scout Thin Mint in ages and I'm pretty sure I could eat 4 boxes without batting an eyelash! Now I'm hungry! That cat's position reminds me of the very last cat I had before the Golden Age began. Actually, we still had Max the cat when we got our first Golden, Sandy. Max used to go lay on the top of the hamper or toilet tank to get higher than Sandy could reach, and that fat, long-haired cat slept like that sometimes. I know I have pictures (not on my computer) of Max. If I can figure out where they are, I'll scan one. Max was a Blue Point Himalayan with gorgeous blue eyes. Debi Edited 08-29-2012 02:09 AM |
