PJ: I hadn't thought of covered glass salts in pear, apple or pumpkin shapes but they definitely fit right in. Thanks for sharing. And I love your chef! I have always wanted one.

Okay, so here's my harvest contribution. I picked this one (and 3 more) up at a yard sale for a grand total of $0.50. They measure 2" x 1-5/8" x 3/4". Never mind the fact that there were candles in them -- they looked to be the right size, and the candles popped right out. Besides, we have lots of open salts in our collections that started out life as something other than a sodium chloride vessel. And, as the saying goes, if it can hold salt.....

Lots of great salts with a food theme. Happy to see them all. I don't have any but I know there's a lot of nut cups with nuts of some kind painted in them too.

Cathy: Glad you had something to add. Lots of candleholders out there make great salts.

Inez: Your sets are always a treat. You must have hundreds of them.

Nancy D: I know there's a lot of those celery and radish tray salts around. Hope there are more to see.

I have the one Susie called an artichoke. That is a strawberry salt by Wetzel. Ed Bowman has it in his information which he has given me permission to link to on my References page. Also have some others I'll have to photograph. I took my pictures several days ago and thought I'd add one or two every few days to keep it going. I think it works out well keeping the past topic just a click away to continue posting items. Debi

109 Nancy Villaverde 09-06-2013 11:30 AM ET (US)	Jette, I had that little dish with flowers and butterflies, thought it odd that so much decoration was on the bottom. It was too large to be a salt, probably a dish for sauce or salad dressing. How big is your bowl? Nancy V
110 Jytte 09-06-2013 12:20 PM ET (US)	Hi Nancy V My bowl/salt is ca 3,5 cm x 9 cm x 7,5 cm I have the same in Blue Fluted, Royal Copenhagen (nr 162111 in my collection) bought as a open salt - but in a book about Blue fluted the call it a (in Danish) "Konfektskål" - in English I think it's "candybowl"

12:41 PM ET (US)
112 Jytte 09-06-2013 03:20 PM ET (US)	Hi Nancy V Herendi,Hungary Jytte
113 Debi Raitz 09-06-2013 03:32 PM ET (US)	Jytte: In early catalogs this size dish was often called a "bon bon" and that is a small candy or mint dish. Yours is made by Herend and it's gorgeous with all the decoration and colors. I have a similar shaped one by Meissen in the Blue Onion pattern. All the blue decor is inside the bowl but the bottom has a lot of raised flowers. It is a shame so much of the pretty part is on the bottom. These monthly topics do make us go searching through our collections more often. While looking for salts that fit the topic, don't we all find a salt we'd forgotten we even had and stop to admire it? I know I do. It keeps us more in touch with our collections. When I first started collecting, I didn't have a computer and didn't go to a meeting or convention until nearly 10 years later. Now we have what you might call a daily meeting and "Show and Tell", or as Sue Sawyer likes to call it, a "Drag & Brag" session. It is fun. Debi
114 Jytte 09-06-2013 04:14 PM ET (US)	 Hi My Blue fluted (nr. 162111), Royal Copenhagen's "bottom has nothing" and it's smaller 3 cm x 8 cm x 6,3 cm than the Herend Jytte

132 Nancy Dietel 09-06-2013 07:17 PM ET (US)	Debi, I didn't think that was what Goofus looks like. I thought it was more of a heavy, bumpy glass. This salt is closer to Bimini. Nancy D
133 Jane Koble 09-06-2013 07:46 PM ET (US)	Sorry, Nancy. I didn't see your post. Yes, that's the one. Jane
134 Debi Raitz 09-06-2013 08:02 PM ET (US)	Nancy D: I don't exactly what makes a piece Goofus glass or not, but all pieces I've ever seen only have gold, red (or cranberry) and green colors on it. Maybe yours is just a painted salt and not Goofus glass at all. But it does look like it. Jane: Not to get extremely nit-picky here, but I think your #127 shape is a peach with the pointy tip. Debi

Debi, I have your #150 in my salt collection, and it's staying there though I have always thought it was made as a cordial. I think it makes a much better salt than cordial with it's rim that would challenge drinking from it.

I should have said an ocean liner. She was built in 1919 in Glasgow. She could accommodate 265 1st class, 370 2nd class, and 1,150 3rd class passengers. In 1935 she was put into service as a troop ship. After the war, she was used as a transport to Palestine. Her last service was as an emigrant ship. She was broken up in 1957.

Take a pad and pen and walk around to everywhere you have open salts and start counting! Shelf by shelf, drawer by drawer, etc. Let's see how many salts people have in their collections. Jytte, you are far more organized than the rest of us and already know your exact number! But let's try it. Just the number you consider as your collection because many of us probably have some put elsewhere that are for sale at meetings or online. I know I have some boxes I haven't looked at in years. Hate to find out how many I have in those boxes! We can post until the end of the month on here and next month you can still post using the "Last Month" link

	above. This topic will become the last month link on October 1. That gives everyone about 6 weeks to accomplish this task. I am curious because at this point, I have no idea whatsoever how many I have. Debi

178 Debi Raitz 09-20-2013 07:42 PM ET (US)	Over half of my number is clear glass individuals. That is mainly what is in the drawers of my two cabinets. It's what I began collecting and I have never parted with any of them unless there were duplicates. No market for them anyway. Most salt collectors don't even give clear glass individuals a second look unless they are a rare EAPG. The "Rest of Kitchen" number is mainly the wall of blue and white and cobalt. Also included are the four cabinets made by John. Each holds up to 50. One of faience, one of Wedgwood and jasperware, one with cobalt and silver and one with Doulton and silver rimmed salts.
179 Salty Nut... P.J. 09-20-2013 10:52 PM ET (US)	I'm sorry... I don't really understand the need to "count" our salts... unless it's to "one upsmanship" each other... I think our collections are for each of us to appreciate... some days I find myself just sitting in front of one of my cabinets and just looking at them and remembering where I got each and every one of them... bringing back memories of one of you fellow collectors, a trip, a problem purchase on ebay... whatever... but, I doubt very much Ed Berg, or Ed Bowman, or many of you collected salts to be able to say "Oh boy, that purchase put me over the 1,000 salt level !!!" I LOVE the idea of sharing our Vegetable salts, our Animal salts, our Oldest salts... I think this is a WONDERFUL way for us to share our collections !!! But... to count our salts is to "one upsmanship" one collector against another and I'm sorry I can't play in that game... That's not sharing... I love you all too much... "The Salty Nut"... P.J.
180 Debi Raitz★ 09-20-2013	PJ: I don't think any of us views it as "one upsmanship". People ask me all time how many salts I have and I am never able to give an accurate answer. It made me curious how many I had and I just thought it would be fun to hear numbers from everyone else too. Doesn't mean one

11:47 PM ET (US)	collection is bigger or better than anyone else's. Just trying to keep people interested and posting.
