Special Salts

"Special" can be special to you because of how you got it, who gave it to you, or who it previously belonged to.
It can also be special because it's one of your favorite salts.
It might be special because it's truly not pictured anywhere or is unique because it's handmade.
Or maybe you just got an incredible deal on it!
Later in the month we can share some special Christmas gift salts from this or previous years.

For some time, I thought this was an enamel salt before I discovered it was pottery. The rims completely hide the edges so it is hard to tell. Then I learned who Theodore Deck was. From that moment on I thought this was a museum quality salt.

The Victoria and Albert Museum has one, but I think mine is even better! Another reason it's special...got it on eBay with little competition for under $50! Long time ago though, probably around 1997-98.

That's wonderful, Debi! And it is sure in better condition than the one in the museum.

Thanks Jane...and thank you too for the redware brochure. Really nice stuff. I guess it's just hit or miss if they make any salts. You were lucky to find one.

I should have explained and shown why I knew it was a Theodore Deck salt. It is very nicely marked on the bottom.

Debi, that is an amazing salt and so much better than the V & A one. A salt to be proud of.

9 Mary Kern★ 12-01-2014 07:36 PM ET (US) IP: 72.220.213.56	 This white Greentown smooth-sided wheelbarrow is special in at least three ways - One and most important is that it was one from my grandmother's collection - The second is that it was very instrumental in starting my friendship with Ed and Kay and third is that I have only seen one other in the white - Even the Greentown collectors have only seen a couple of them -- Maybe Don won the one that was on eBay several years ago -- I truly would like to know if anyone else has one ----
10 Debi Raitz★ 12-03-2014 07:30 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.220.22	There is usually a mad rush at the beginning of the month for topic posting. I thought many of us would have some special salts. I have many more but I generally like to wait and fill in gaps towards the end of the month. Maybe this will just be a slow month with Christmas preparations and all.

This set is special because I complained on this board that I never had any coralene. Jane offered me this set and I jumped at the chance. I do love it! Thanks, Jane. My most special salts have come from friends.

I have shown this before, but this is really so special. Don bought it for me as a gift for our 50th anniversary. We went into this antique shop on Cape Cod and the lady had just come back from an auction. She had two of these sets, but one was damaged. She asked me how to price them. Don't remember what I said, but Don bought me the better set.

30 Nancy C Villaverde★ 12-06-2014 05:19 PM ET (US) IP: 66.25.55.26	 Lots of my salts are special because of the people who gave them to me and the connected stories. This pretty apricot colored art salt in stand was given to me by an English woman who lived in Barnby in the Willows, close to the B&B my sister and I were staying in to attend some antiques fairs. We met her and her daughter at dinner at the B&B one evening when it happened that we had taken their usual table for a weekly dinner out. They were very cordial and invited us to their home the following evening. I think I've told this story here before, but I saw this salt sitting on a small table and remarked how pretty it was. She insisted that I take it, saying it was nothing to her and she had purchased it at a neighborhood bring and buy. I protested, but wasn't hard to convince, and she even added a second stand that had come along with it. I'll never forget Chris Ferguson and her daughter Fiona or give up this salt.

So nice to see your "as always beautiful" salts with stories. The Neal book and these salts are very special to me because a collector-friend let me buy them after she got a deadly cancer-diagnosis - she knew about my home-page-project and ment that both the book and the salts could be useful for me. I still miss her

I think our friendships make salt collecting oh so much more enjoyable, the " icing in the cake " so to speak! This hobby is so much more satisfying with friends who encourage and share their wealth of knowledge and understand our "obsession" - thanks Friends!!!

	 Wanted to share a pic of my special salt cabinet; this cabinet was my Mom's; and I think of her every time I look at it. When my Mom and Dad would come over she would always ask if I had gotten anything new??? And want to see and hold any latest treat!!! I know she would be tickled to see all the gorgeous salts in Her cabinet.....I miss her so much!

I don't have a cabinet from mine, but, like your mom, she was always excited to see any new salts I acquired. Good memories! This category is turning out to be about friends and relatives who helped us with our collecting bug. How wonderful, at this time of the year particularly, we are sharing these precious salts. They are precious, not always in terms of dollar worth, but because we remember the warm feelings that come rushing back when we share our stories.

	 This is a special salt to me because I bought it on ebay described as "small lid to something." A friend who spends much more time trolling on ebay than I do spotted it and sent the auction to me. Once a glass-friend from Funen visited me - we had to share/trade some picture-information and then I saw one of these (my todays salts) - he also had the link with informations - juhoo!

P.J. - I also do admire looking at beautiful salts I don't know anything about but I "get a little "high"" when I can add information about "where and when" on my home-page

Oh Jytte... Your little salts rang one of my "memory bells" Olen and I made a special trip to Paris about 4 years ago... We ate a special dinner at the Jules Verne Restaurant in the Eiffel Tower... WOW !!! Anyway... they had SALT CELLARS on the table !!! (Pictured above - similar to YOURS) We asked if they had them for sale.. in a tourist shop or what ever... Our waiters (notice the plural !!! - at that price - there were a few !!!) all scrambled around and they all came back and said Nope.. none available... and being the honest people we are... neither of us could swipe one... so... we just made ourselves content with just taking photos... Pretty aren't they... They are all one piece... and I'm pretty sure they were an alloy material... Great meal... great views... great memories !!! Thanks for bringing them up again !!!

Oh, P.J. Those salts are lovely. I had a similar experience at Windows on the World in the old World Trade Center (Twin Towers). My son's class was treated to a special tour of the Trade Center because the father of a classmate was the director. We went through the restaurant, but didn't eat there, and I saw they had salt cellars on each table. It was early in my collecting days, and I don't remember what they looked

IP: 74.105.140.134	like. But my son told the executive that I really wanted to steal one. Unfortunately, I don't even remember what they looked like. Edited 12-14-2014 06:22 PM

OK... Here is my Really, REALLY special salt... We were in Jerusalem, Israel May a year ago... The one thing I wanted was a salt dish from the TIME of Christ... NOT A SALT THAT CHRIST USED !!! (Understand the difference !!!) Our tour director arranged to take our minister and Olen and me to a Registered Antiquities dealer... Who helped us pick out just exactly what I was looking for ... The Certificate of Authenticity identifies it as "An Ancient Alabaster Bowl, in very good condition, dating from the first - third century, found in Israel." Dimensions 75mm wide 55mm height. The Salt and the Trip had very special meaning for both Olen and me...

I can't tell for sure from your pictures but it looks like it has a ground down rim. It might have been a goblet or vase or something a bit taller to begin with. The picture on its side shows a odd profile. It may well be very old glass and it looks like the base has a polished pontil. I hope I'm wrong about it being ground down...just can't make out the pictures that well.
137 Nancy Dietel★ 12-25-2014 05:13 AM ET (US)	It is beautiful, Susie, no matter what it is. I see the tag says "ruby glass". Because the color is such a deep red, I think a better description might be "pigeon blood". I think ruby is a clearer and brighter red.

Nancy D: What is the shape of the base under the salt? We need to figure out what salt went with it. The curved brass probably hooked over the top of the salt to hold it in place. With good measurements I bet one of us could find a more accurate salt. The dog is adorable. He is like Mary's dog but her salt holder is totally different so it's no help in figuring out yours.

	BTW: I suppose elephants can be critters. It will be all animals and insects except dogs, cats and swans.
148 Don Rabourn 12-27-2014 09:19 AM ET (US) IP: 99.130.166.121	Hi Nancy D. I THINK your Dog with "cart" Salt is SPECIAL! Maybe not REAL OLD(the cut and polished salt is more "modern"), but certainly something that I've not seen before! Good "find"!
150 Nancy Dietel ★ 12-27-2014 10:41 AM ET (US) IP: 74.105.140.134	Don, I think maybe the salt was a replacement for an older salt. The dog is porcelain and the whole set up seems old to me. Debi, the bottom is polished and it does seem like a newer salt as Don suggested.
151 Debi Raitz ★ 12-27-2014 07:04 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Nancy D: I meant the shape under the salt. Can you take a picture of it without the salt in it? Then what are the measurements that would fit in it?
152 Nancy Dietel ★ 12-27-2014 07:33 PM ET (US) IP: 74.105.140.134	O.K., Debi. I misunderstood. I will dig it out tomorrow and take some photos. And measurements.

Houston, we have a problem. I thought I would put all my art glass salts together in my cabinet as they are my favourites and all special to me, they were distributed thru out the cabinet according to colour. Now I have them all out, I realise they are not going to fit in the space I cleared out. Now I have to clean and polish and try to get everything back in, and when I do that, they never fit.

Nancy, I need some of your wine, looks like my type of glass. Can then truthfully say, only had one.

Janelle, gorgeous collection.
My whirlwind son started messing with my salts on the entertainment cabinet. He said everything needed to be dusted. He is right, but I had a fit! There are salts there to be catalogued and others to be photographed and there is a method to my madness. Keep your mitts off my salts, dust or not!

NOW WE KNOW WHO has the "market covered" in these pretty little "jewels"! WOW, what a variety of holders and salts! I saw a "Curio Cabinet" 3 weeks ago(at a local year-round Flea Market) that was "to die for" for collections of any kind! 6 foot wide and 8 foot tall, and all Glass from top to bottom and sides. It had 5 glass shelves(&holes for IP: 99.130.171.17	more shelves). Even the price was GREAT ($425.00)!! If I could have figured a way to get it loaded and home and my Breakfront unloaded and hauled off, I would be sitting here looking at it!! For a lot of money, I could have found someone who would do it! But then it wouldn't have a "bargain", and I wouldn't trust just anyone to handle all the "goodies"!! At 74, I hate that I didn't see something like this "years ago" ! It wasn't just a "bargain", but was a Real Beauty with 5 big lights in the top! I DO Thank GOD for all the Good Things in my life, I just wish I'd seen something like this when I could have handled it!

161 Janelle 12-28-2014 08:06 PM ET (US) IP: 124.171.59.94	Don, that cabinet sounds like it would be perfect for salts. I do really need another cabinet, but have nowhere to put it. Jim got a workshop for his woodwork, I think a dedicated room for salts is not too much to ask for. I think Jim is afraid if I had that,I would be uncontrollable. Don't know why.
162 Jytte 12-29-2014 01:38 AM ET (US) IP: 90.184.148.85	 Janelle I'm with Susie - could always find a place for some of these beauties:-) I'm just "dried out"!! My todays very "simple" salt made me drool too - a gift from a friend who know - this is one of my favourite colors
163 Janelle 12-29-2014 03:42 AM ET (US) IP: 124.168.144.115	Hi Jytte, Very pretty colour, I must admit I have not seen one in the cranberry. Salts from friends are always that much more special.
164 Susie P 12-29-2014 10:24 AM ET (US) IP: 69.254.61.205	Hi Don!!! Now just remember, I Am close by, and would be tickled to handle the goodies!!!! LOL! That cabinet sounds perfect, but since just got 2 new ones a couple months ago, can't imagine telling Gary I need another already, ha ha ha! Maybe in a few months! I totally filled the big one with perfumes, so maybe salts later!!!
165 Nancy Dietel ★ 12-29-2014 10:59 AM ET (US) IP: 74.105.140.134	 This refers to #146, dog & cart. This is the bottom of the piece with

	salt. Without photo to follow. Measurements of cart is 4" long, wheels 7/8" diam. And they turn. Dog is 2" long x 2" tall. Salt is 1" high, 2" diam, 8 sides. Definitely should be about 3/4" shorter for the hooks to lock in the salt. Never looked close enough to realize it didn't fit. Too excited to win it I guess.

Now the scale is much better and the hooks on the frame lock the salt in place. Can't believe I never noticed the other salt was all wrong! You might try a pottery salt to "go with" the doggie if you find one the right size. No telling what the salt might originally have been with him. Jytte, I also love the red salt. I have a small glass case stocked with these that I think of as jewels or jellies, several different colors. I think the red ones are hardest to find. They are all faceted, but some are round and some oval. I've been very lazy about pictures lately, but I'll try to post one of my group.

I had to take them out to photograph and then noticed I have another canary one that I left out, so 9 count. I have two red ones, only one with the kind of base with narrow cuts like Jytte's, and mine is blue. I am usually content with one salt of each kind, so I suppose these are special to me.

171 Debi Raitz★ 12-29-2014 09:11 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	The frame on the dog cart salt looks like it should have an oval salt in it. Didn't these Palais Royale types use shells in many of the cart salts?
172 Debi Raitz★ 12-29-2014 09:18 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Just did a quick search on images of Palais Royal salts and the first one I found (that rarely happens!) looks like a perfect match for your frame Nancy. Just find a shell to fit and you'll be very close to original!

176 E. Jane Koble★	Nancy, I would have been too excited to realize the salt wasn't quite the right size either. I'll have to post my goat card in "critters next month - oh, and my duck cart! This is going to be fun!

182 Debi Raitz★ 12-31-2014 02:11 AM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	I really liked the white one with the black hearts so I wrote to see if they had any more. Since they said they were going to make more I requested blue hearts instead of black. They made the cobalt first then the white ones. Couldn't decide by the pictures so I bought all four. I will sell one of the cobalt and probably the one with the iridescent hearts. I really like it but not as much as the white with blue hearts.

186 Debi Raitz★ 12-31-2014 05:27 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Sorry Nancy V...I should have said they are made by David Salazar. That was brought up when we talked about the white one with black hearts but it probably wasn't mentioned again. My fault. Yes, they are brand new and signed and dated by Salazar. I was just so excited about the white one with the blue hearts I neglected the details.
