5 Nancy C Villaverde★ 10-01-2015 01:01 PM ET (US)	One void in my collection is the Battersea style enameled metal salt. I'm expecting to see some nice examples here.
6 Linda Houser 10-01-2015 03:54 PM ET (US)	 this is my favorite in this category !
7 Linda Houser 10-01-2015 04:00 PM ET (US)	 here's another one of mine this isn't so pretty, and the plate is big for the salt
8 Linda Houser 10-01-2015 04:03 PM ET (US)	 beautiful butterflies, this is more like a butter pat though

Now this one I don't know if the base is metal or not, but it's the tiniest one I've seen that's not a toy dish, 1 1/4" across, and half an inch deep.

61 Lynda LaLonde★ 10-04-2015 11:37 AM ET (US)	Mary, Mary, Mary. Exquisite, scrumptious, spectacularly awesome. J.J.'s suitcase idea is a good one. My problem is, I don't know if I could keep my hands out of the suitcase long enough, to make my break. Debi, Is that salt yours or a picture? I ask only because there is no blue. Lololol. Edited 10-04-2015 11:39 AM
62 Debi Raitz★ 10-04-2015 05:27 PM ET (US)	Funny you should mention that Lynda. I bought two of them together and one was a turquoise blue. It was a tough choice but I thought the white was a bit more uncommon so I kept it and sold the other. It goes back to the 2001 convention. Found them at an antiques show going on the same weekend as the convention.
63 Mary Kern★ 10-05-2015 12:11 PM ET (US)	Definitely a good choice Debi !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

66 Mary Kern★ 10-05-2015 07:05 PM ET (US)	Okay - So while I had all three cats in because we had a bit of rain and Bob was sure they would panic - I was locked out of my office - I took my trusty phone and took a picture of each of the Champeve pieces I have left - I will show the bases only unless the glass salt is rather unique also - That way you can really see the designs - Just a couple at a time though as it is a long month and they are all I have left for this category --

Large double with a center handle - This one would not have been a

Love your double and the little boat shaped one too. I have a total of 3, the bee I already posted, a plainer red, white and blue one, and the best is a tiny one I will post next.
91 Debi Raitz * 10-08-2015 09:11 PM ET (US)	 Sorry, it's an old picture, but the salt is pretty tiny anyway.
92 Mary Kern * 10-08-2015 09:57 PM ET (US)	 I love all of yours Debi especially this last one -- Only the two I posted earlier as being with someone else are gone - The rest of these are truly mine and I think I have reached the point where these will be with me for quite a while -- I also have a mess of the spoons - Not sure why I do not display them with the salts - Maybe I will take a group picture of the spoons -- The other night I took all the salts off the shelf and took pictures of each one just to be sure I had them - Only to find out that I did in fact have Bob's professional ones - But hey I worked hard to get my pictures so that is what I am showing the most - lol lol -- Will send you my Champleve folder and you may use any of the pictures you want -- This is

	my one and only plique du jour and isn't it ironic it should be in the classic champlevé style -- pretty cool huh --
93 Mary Kern ★ 10-08-2015 09:58 PM ET (US)	 I have a plique spoon for it also --
94 Nancy C Villaverde ★ 10-09-2015 01:37 PM ET (US)	Mary, all of those Champleve salts are scrumptious! They haven't even been a favorite of mine, kept 2 in my collection, but I'm rethinking this lapse in my taste. Am I the only one who is such a tightwad that favorites often tend to be ones I bought for a song?
95 Mary Kern ★ 10-09-2015 01:45 PM ET (US)	 Yep you are Nancy ----- lol lol lol ---- Sorry I could not resist -- I know I have many that I am tickled more with because they did not cost me what they actually should have -- But then I also love those that cost me more than they should have -- lol lol Raised open work pedestal base --

02:07 PM ET (US)	 Yeah, Mary, I love some I paid a lot for too. Here's my Champleve set including matching spoon that cost a big $7. It was in a flea/antique mall with no indication of what it was. It's the funny little shape with turned under corners to make feet, OSC Plate 448.
98 Mary Kern ★ 10-09-2015 03:22 PM ET (US)	That is a pretty one Nancy - I am sure I have matching spoons for most of mine - but they are in my spoon drawer - I know makes perfect sense --
99 Debi Raitz ★ 10-09-2015 08:33 PM ET (US)	Mary: Meant to ask you about the one you show in #92 and #93. Is it a see through glass or glass applied to the brass backing? In a couple spots it looks like it is glass applied to a brass back but I can't for sure. Plique a jour is see through like stained glass. Personally I think the glass with a backing is actually more unusual than plique a jour. Have never seen it before.
100 Mary Kern ★ 10-09-2015 10:13 PM ET (US)	It is see through glass Debi - I took it to one of the meetings shortly after I got it because I was not sure - I received confirmation that it was in fact Plique a jour -- I had a great picture Bob took shortly after I got it that really showed the stained glass effect - but somehow - some time - some stupidity - deleted it - When he took more pictures for me we never were able to get it to show as clearly as the original picture he took -- Ding Dong Dang -- But no - it is definitely "stained glass" plique --
101 Mary Kern ★ 10-09-2015 10:14 PM ET (US)	 Rectangular base - This is another non-production line piece -

127 Debi Raitz ★ 10-10-2015 12:00 PM ET (US)	Joan: They are enamel over copper. I had them at a meeting once where salts were appraised. I don't remember what was discussed about value but we were trying to figure out why the back sides of both are blackened and not decorated. It was suggested they once a part of a centerpiece that may have included either a larger bowl or candle holder. They definitely date before electricity. Also discovered that only family could use the family crest and the one in the bowls is Bourbon, which was the family of Henry the VIII. Pretty cool! I have tried to look up images of medieval table centerpieces but could never find any. That would have to be a fairly specialized museum. I don't know of any. Besides, it would probably have to be a French museum.
128 Nancy Dietel ★ 10-10-2015 12:43 PM ET (US)	Debi, weren't the Bourbons French? How does that tie to Henry III? One of his wives French?
129 Debi Raitz ★ 10-10-2015 01:16 PM ET (US)	You're right Nancy. I don't know why Henry the VIII came to mind. Can't think now of the French king I should have said. I'll have to investigate.
130 Debi Raitz ★ 10-10-2015 01:23 PM ET (US)	The Bourbon French royalty includes all the Louis's - Louis XIV, XV, etc.
131 Nancy Dietel ★ 10-10-2015 01:41 PM ET (US)	Thanks, Debi. It is clearer to me now. The kings of France, Spain and England were always scheming to marry daughters and those of the royal courts to kings and princes of each other's Royal families to gain power and alliances. So interesting. Anyway, the Bourbon salts are extraordinary and you are lucky to own them!
132 Mary Kern ★ 10-10-2015 02:42 PM ET (US)	It is far too hot to stay here in Sandy Eggo Debi - I think your area is much cooler - Hope you don't mind a quick drop by - I do love French toast - French fries - French salts - French can can dancers - French salts and of course I tend to lean towards a bit of a like for French salts See ya real soon
133 Janelle 10-10-2015 07:46 PM ET (US)	I am seriously lacking in the champleve type of open salts, none, zilch, I now know why they do not appear in the marketplace, they have all been snavelled by Mary And Susie. Mind you, I am not complaining because how else would I get to see so many gorgeous salts all in one place. Debi, those salts are extra special. Frustrating not to know the complete history though.

A small salt with the HMS Renown emblem in enamel. Actually a fascinating history when I checked about this Battleship. Used by Winston Churchill to go to many meetings during the war, chased the Bismarck etc.

158 Nancy Dietel★ 10-11-2015 07:09 AM ET (US)	Joan F. You certainly have more unique salts than I have ever seen. Gorgeous all! I have never seen the champleve holders with a cobalt salt. So beautiful!
159 Nancy C Villaverde★ 10-12-2015 10:55 AM ET (US)	All I can say is WOW, Joan. I love the Viennese enamel, and the plique with the enamel around the glass rim, and what a lovely spoon. I'm guessing the Batttersea in a holder was a creative way to handle damaged or missing feet? Did you have it done or get it that way?
160 Nancy C Villaverde★ 10-12-2015 10:58 AM ET (US)	Debi, that pair of French enamels would be the pride and joy of any collection. I do think you might find a classier way of describing the work under the enamel on the green salt than "chicken wire." lol
161 Lynda LaLonde★ 10-12-2015 02:13 PM ET (US)	OOOOHHHH Joan, Joan, Joan. OOOHHHHH Mary, Mary, Mary. BEAUTIFUL. Edited 10-12-2015 02:13 PM
162 Joan F.★ 10-12-2015 06:01 PM ET (US)	Nancy V., The Battersea salt came that way. Most likely the feet were gone or damaged beyond repair and someone thought enough of the pretty little salt that they lovingly made a stand for it, complete with matching rim. Frankly, I like it better in the elegant stand than with those ugly misshaped duck feet that are original to these salts.
163 Nancy C Villaverde★ 10-12-2015 06:47 PM ET (US)	Right you are, Joan. Battersea salts do walk on ugly little duck feet. Maybe that's my justification for not buying one so far.
