Critters

Little critters, big critters or insects...whatever critters you choose...but let's skip dogs, cats, swans and birds. Birds will be next month and we have already done the other three.
Can be figural or just an image on a salt.

Griffins, also a cross between Lion & Eagle. Griffin are known as guardians of treasure, so will fit right in with the Sphinx. H&J 4327 circa 1850

	Gone Crazy and to the frogs...I know this isn't a salt. When I see this toothpick holder I always have to chuckle, and think the frog is a lot like me; trying to handle more than he can easily manage. So of course when one came up for sale on eBay for a couple of dollars I had to get it.

I don't know if this was intended to be a salt, it has Japan on the bottom, and the frogs seem to be made a lot better than the "bowl" in front of them, Its probably three inches long

Is okay - Saves us going back to old topics Sometimes I think we should start over from the first one and have "do over add on" with each topic already done - Our collections change over the years and I never think to go back 2 or 3 years and post it --- Oh wait - Dumb - I never think anyway ----

"little" things pass right by antique dealers unless it is a special glass or has jewels - Until I started selling at the monthly show here - Most of the dealers had no idea what an Open Salt was - It has been interesting watching their knowledge grow about our passion - Here is my dragon - You have seen him before - but I adore him and love to show him off - He went to the club meeting last Saturday and was one of the stars of my presentation on Desvres style Faience - I discovered that even if you do not know anything - If you talk fast - loud and with enthusiasm - bring lots of pieces they can fondle - and don't take questions - Voila - presentation done - lol

	This certainly is a critter! What kind? Maybe a possum, it has a tapered face with sharp nose. No markings.
214 Nancy Dietel 01-13-2015 10:00 AM ET (US) IP: 74.105.128.218
	This is a very heavy metal elephant and holder. The salt is a mineral, perhaps quartz.

My goodness - Everyone has a house full of critters - Would any of you mind sharing pictures as I would love to do one of my columns on "Crittters" - Please let me know - After all this time I am getting slow of brain on things to write about --
Here is a close up of the two different piggies - He has a broken ear - Must have fought off a rival for her affection - They were not purchased together or even within a short time of each other so I am very fortunate to have them as a set --

This is Bruce the Bear, (he only arrived today and he is my only Bear) and so cute. I do believe it could be related to Sir Spread Eagle as he does share the family look, although I am not sure it had such illustrious relatives and is probably just a commoner.

Janelle... You have a crab there !!! YUM !!! You steam a bunch of them with special hot spicy seasoning in a BIG pot... dump them out onto a table covered with news paper... Take a hammer to their hard shells and "pick out" the YUMMY SWEET white meat in their breasts and claws... whoooooo puppy is that GOOD EATS !!! Serve them up with corn on the cob and cold sodas, cold slaw and you're sitting in "tall cotton" !!! Is anyone elses mouth watering ??? Some people consider crabs meat sweeter than lobster... If it's cooked properly (not boiled in water - but properly steamed !!!) It can be really sweet !!!
 Enough said about the crab !!!
 How about a turtle !!! I know there a lot out there but no one has put them up ???

PJ you are making my mouth water. I can really taste those crabs. Someone would have to cook them for me though. Jim's boss gave him a live mud crab once, neither if us wanted to dispatch it. Even if we stuck it in the freezer till comatose and then cooked it it was a no go. So Mr Crab was taken down to the river near us, released and

IP: 124.171.1.118	hopefully procreated lots of other crabs. I loved eating them at restaurants when I was younger but they and lobster seem to be way overpriced now. Will just stick with my China one,(which was made in Japan by a company that made lots of souvenirs.)

I haven't purchased a salt at a flea market out here in the 25 years I've lived here !!! You're invited to try !!! I'll pay your hotel bill !!! Heck you can stay with us !!! Only when we use to go on our motor home tours would we find salts... or when we went over seas !!! Believe me I've tried !!! I've even tried estate sales !!! IF they had salts... they were the little dollar salts and then they were all chipped... probably from Great Grandmoms wagon ride out !!! Yes... they do have the little Mexican and Native American "small pots"... But... that's about all... and they're usually at "high end" tourist traps... quite expensive... Oh well... I'd never seen it in person before either. One with a ruffled rim recently sold high on ebay. 281536218618 I think mine is prettier.

My Aunt Queen had them and hers were rather nasty little things although it may have been her spoiling of them that produced that result. They had perky little ears and a tail that curved up over their backs.

A short note about Kokopelli... from the Southwest... Hopi lore... His "hump on his back is said to carry seed... symbolic of his "other seed"... His head dress - traditional feathers... and his flute... below is a quote from a 1990 "travel brochure" - from Olen's niece.. who use to be a nurse for the Hopi school district...
"Kokopelli was said to play a flute as he traveled to pronounce his arrival to the villagers and it was considered the greatest of honors to be the women he chose to be his "dream time companion" for his duration of time in the village as many of these women apparently bore children from these unions.
Jane... the little salt you have was more likely used to hold corn pollen to be spread during Zuni's Shalako ceremony in late December... But, as we say... it holds salt ... therefore... it IS a salt !!!

339 E. Jane Koble★ 01-28-2015 08:38 PM ET (US) IP: 174.60.234.51	Whatever it was, I feel like I was lucky to find it. The Navajos say Kokopeli was a trickster Kachina, rather than an evil Kachina as some of them were.
340 The Salty Nut... P.J.★ 01-29-2015 12:00 AM ET (US) IP: 73.26.118.186	Jane... I was in NO way putting your salt down... Kokopeli was in deed a trickster... by going from tribe to tribe visiting with his back pack of "seeds" he carried stories and news with him ... The tribes/pueblos loved to have him visit with his news and stories... Your salt is indeed a lucky find !!! It is hand made... doubly great !!! Is it signed ??? Makes it even greater !!! Enjoy !!!

Mine has a number 6 (though it could be a letter B) and a 4 digit number, all in red paint. The first digit isn't clear, maybe a 9, followed by 463. There is a tiny impressed spot near an edge that is hard to make out. I thought it was a 7. What is the Ashworth mark?

	Here's the other side, photo I took now that I have it. The first was from the auction page. There are several images of the foo dog and these pretty circles, maybe wheels? I'm not surprised it's from an English maker. The auction title described it as Victorian pattern open salt.
