3 Nancy Dietel 02-01-2015 09:09 AM ET (US) IP: 74.105.128.218	 Lalique-like, pale blue birds. One of my favorites!
4 Nancy Dietel 02-01-2015 09:12 AM ET (US) IP: 74.105.128.218	 I absolutely love this salt. Given to me a long time ago by a treasured Aunt. There are different birds on each side.
5 Nancy Dietel 02-01-2015	This is a matching double with different game birds on both sides and in bowls. I think from Jane, a few years back. I will show both sides and inside.

So many birds! I don't have many, but here are a couple I just found. The first is on a toothpick holder I use for Q-tips. It belongs in a set with mustard pot and open salt, possibly a tray. I had the mustard but broke it.

I'm not sure what the blue bird with long beak on the toothpick is, but I think this is a stork, and it's on a little cup or salt probably by Moser.

Almost out of bird salts...how about a few real ones?

This little guy fell out of a nest about 20 years ago. I fed him baby food, mushed up berries and worms when I found them. My golden Sandy would watch over him. He went everywhere I did for about a month. When I worked in the yard I put him in my hanging basket. When he learned to fly he would go up in a tree, but would still come back when I made his feeding sound noise. Then I guess he was just old enough to find his own food and start life on his own. That was fun. I have some old pictures, not digital ones. Maybe I'll dig them out and scan them before the end on the month.

I cannot find anymore bird salts so this is Toby & the Butcher Bird having a stare off. Jim feeds about 11 Butcher birds 4 or 5 Kookaburras and various other birds depending on the season in the morning. The Butcher bird has a beautiful voice and is named because he takes his food and hangs it on a twig in the trees to store for later.

April 2013... coming home from Cairo,Egypt - we were on planes for 36 hours- that's right thirty six HOURS - (door to door) - 4 planes... NEVER, NEVER, NEVER want to do that again !!!!! And though, I LOVE PARIS... no matter what time of year... I will NEVER, NEVER, NEVER fly into or out of Charles De Gaulle if my life depended on it !!! Would you believe it... going into and out of that airport they called the city police in to clear Olen because he had a pace-maker !!!! Like he was going to blow the airport or the airplane up ?????? No, my friend, I have had it with flying !!! And we were flying first class... I can't imagine how they treat coach class anymore ?????? No thank you !!!

Can't even imagine what you have to go through at airports now and have no desire to find out. I wouldn't mind trying a train sometime but that would only work if I was going west. You can't go east from the Detroit area without either going to Chicago first or going to Toledo to catch a train east. Hard to believe there is no Amtrak service between Detroit and Toledo but there wasn't the last time I checked it out.

286 Debi Raitz ★ 02-27-2015 05:08 AM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Just admit it Lynda. You hate polishing silver like the rest of do. Some things look a bit nicer with a little patina, but shiny silver is gorgeous. Just hate trying to keep it that way...and constantly shining plated silver will wear it away. So your correct comment should be that you're saving the silver plating. LOL            Mary: Love the ducky!            Jytte: The real peacocks picture is gorgeous too.            We did have a rather fine showing this month. I'm inclined to go with Mary's suggestion of square salts but I don't know if there would be very many. Any other suggestions? Check the past topics link above to make sure we haven't already done it. We never did salts with labels or marked salts before. That would be quite a few...although photographing some marks might be tough to do, especially on glass.
287 Lynda LaLonde 02-27-2015 09:37 AM ET (US) IP: 73.22.4.12	Huh, I really thought I'd get alot of comments about the Crane nuts. You guys didn't really like them? They are small, just under 3". Super thin porcelain. Oh well, for me, not crazy over porcelain...these take my breath away.            Yea Debi, ya got me. Sterling is beautiful when polished. Although, I do have a quad coated silver tea service that I really do love unpolished.            Edited 02-27-2015 09:41 AM

Nancy Dietel 02-27-2015 12:54 PM ET (US) IP: 74.105.144.96	Lynda, I have one of those crane salts. I have seen tea sets with the same motif. I have also seen the cranes with a pink background. I like them very much, just haven't found many to buy.
290 The Salty Nut... P.J.★ 02-27-2015 05:23 PM ET (US) IP: 73.26.118.186	Ahhhh... salts with labels on them... want to know a dummy... that's me... now you know !!! When I first started collecting... any salt I got that still had a sticker... into the sink it went to soak off the sticker... duhhhhh..... And I even once got a salt... a turtle, I believe... that had some gold embossing on him... yep... soaked him in all sorts of "stuff"... even tried turpentine for a week... steel wool and a wire brush finally worked to get that gold "paint" off that little guy... Yep... I was going to be a "purist" I was going to only collect clear crystal salts... didn't want any ugly stickers or "paint" on em... nope... the dope got all that junk off em.... LOL,LOL, LOL Now you want to set up a category of salts with stickers on them.... Well... see ya in April !!! :-}
291 Mary Kern★ 02-27-2015 10:21 PM ET (US) IP: 72.220.213.56	I truly think there are quite a few square salts out there - Lots of them in silver - which I do love to polish and make shiny bright - and even porcelain and pottery - Guess we could add rectangular too -- Sometime when we run out of ideas we could take a couple of pages from the books and see if we can amongst all of us - account for each and every salt on the page -- I am not talking the Daum pages - But just regular salts - Guess that means we would have to work at the back of the OSC and mostly the H&J - Might be fun though -- Marks would be good too as long as SOME ONE OF US don't have to know what the mark means -- Hey this would be a way for SOME ONE OF US to find out what we have -----
292 Lynda LaLonde 02-28-2015 01:30 PM ET (US) IP: 73.22.4.12	Ohhh, P.J., I am betting we all have a story of something interesting we have done. The money I have OVER SPENT on salts. AND EMBARRASSED to admit I still sometimes do it. When I do, sigh...I get angry at the salt and don't like it very much. Sometimes I worry about my brain.
293 Mary Kern★ 02-28-2015 01:36 PM ET (US) IP: 72.220.213.56	I - who have aided and abetted the Bimini Glass boom - threw away my first one because I thought it was plastic ..... I guess I have been on meds longer than I thought ----
294 The Salty Nut... P.J.★ 02-28-2015 03:15 PM ET (US) IP: 73.26.118.186	 Mary... You're just too funny... I found these little ones while on the Rhine River In Pasau, Germany... WAY BACK WHEN ??? Had NO idea they were salts... just thought they were just the prettiest little things... just had to have them... never thought they would make it home whole... they were sooo fragile... Well they are in my "primary" cabinet... eye level... front and... foremost... LOL !!! OK... This photo was just shot... ugh... against a kleenex and I tried to photo shop correct... the colors all seem to run together because I tried to rush it... anyway... the front one is the prettiest lavender and the two back ones are pretty green... these were the only three the glass shop had because the town was just recovering from a monumental flood... I should have gotten a card from the shop... dumb me... didn't know any better... live long enough and you learn... :-}

I believe these to be very rare, only because I always look for them and never find them. Wonder what it means when the Nippon stamp can't be found.
