Amberina is an amber or yellow color with orange or red. I think this is one of Cathy's salts. It was the first example image I could find.

Thanks Debi - don't think I have any...in this color
Sue - Thanks ☺ - and you should know what patter mean in Danish - and it wouldn't "fit" the glass
Salt: could be from Sweden - but I really don't know. ...

I hate to interrupt, Nancy, because you may be the queen of amber. Or is that Jane? I have only 4 amber and one is doubtful so I'll go ahead. It won't be a very long interruption.

I love your amber bird with napkin ring set. I had it in clear once. Sold it at a convention.

Here's the maybe amber. It's cut to clear, and more of an apricot or orange than true amber, but I don't know exactly what to call it. I call it pretty.

Even the three I'm pretty sure are amber are all different shades of color. I have some amber stained pieces, but amber stain comes across as just yellow sometimes.

Jytte 10-03-2016 02:58 PM ET (US) IP: 90.185.73.22	Debi - I do read English (school-English) - I speak (a little) English - what make it difficult for me is the very big difference between the Danish spelling and the English spelling - and then of course the gramma when I write - but when I see "a translator" translate - it's often very weird what "come out" and it makes no sence - so I have chosen to do it myself as good as possible - knowing you'll try to understand even if it's spelled wrong and I'm using is instead of are etc.....

Amberina swan boat from Bittersweet produced by Fenton. These were made first by Mosaic Glass Company (With plain smooth rains.) in clear glass. St Clair made the boat in several colors with ribbed rains. Bittersweet had Fenton reproduced the boat and Gibson also reproduced it.

Fan and diamond pattern with amber stain, the kind that looks quite yellow. When I first came across these, I had no idea it was called amber stain. The darker reflections are from ruby stained pieces sitting on either side.

A few days ago, Mary asked about anything new we were working on; we are going to show an Amber Salt that goes with this Amber column. Before long, we are going to get with Debi and set up a Seller's Page. This salt shows what we've done with the shape; our first kiln salts had "pointed" corners --- we've rounded the corners off and now, the tops are a series of Scallops and Ruffles.

	With the recent pic's of Marigold Carnival Salts; we still have some of the Marigold Carnival spray left from our molten glass days. It is nasty stuff to work with so Terry has to build an exhaust hood to take care of the nasty part; but we will be making Marigold Carnival Salts. Recently, there was a pic of a Black Adventurine Salt; when we were doing the molten glass salts --- we made several that we encased sparkling Silver Mica in them and they were always popular, so we will be working with the encased Mica and making "spangled" glass salts. Debi, sorry about "hi-jacking" this page.

You can tell that I don't get on very often, but LOVE Mary's #168!! Have NEVER seen a holder like that! Don was SMART to want you to keep it! If you ever get a "bug" to sell it again, remember this DON!

Plate 256 in the OSC, Don. I bought three of them together on eBay but they aren't my cup of tea so I sold them all. Each one had different colored stones in the crescent moons.

So many unusual intaglio designs, Jane. Fun to see. At one time I thought all existing designs were on the H&J pages. Just as I thought 5000 must be an over estimate. Wrong!
Love your doggie. I have the cat, but it's on a green salt.

Jytte: I think that would be a very difficult category for most of us. I can only think of my cobalt salt with silver overlay that is an obvious Art Deco design and possibly a couple Doulton that might be considered Art Nouveau. I try to think of fairly broad categories where the few of us that post here have multiple salts. If we combined it with another type or two that is also limited then maybe we would have enough to keep going for a month. How about if we did Art Deco, Art Nouveau, Blue Willow and Blue Onion? None of these would fill a month on their own but combined we should have enough.

This site/page always inspire me - open my eyes for salts I have never seen - I know so very little about the Jugend, Art Nouveau....Think it's an exciting period - just to find the difference between Art Nouveau and Art Deco is difficult for me...

I tend to think of Art Deco as more angular and Art Nouveau as a lot of curves, but there's a lot that would be questionable to me too. To me, that Cambridge NAUTLUS is definitely one of them, but I don't know which one! I lean towards Art Deco but it is curvy.
