8 Janelle 03-31-2016 08:36 PM ET (US) IP: 124.168.176.16	My apologies, it is the 1st April here☐ So feeling foolish.
9 Janelle 03-31-2016 08:39 PM ET (US) IP: 124.168.176.16	Susie. WANT, so want No. 5. It is one I visit to drool over. I have 6 but I think it is paler.
10 Susie P★ 03-31-2016 08:43 PM ET (US) IP: 75.103.187.136	Ha, you are right on time, I am early, lol!! The joke is on me, kinda goes with my day!! I guess I must wait till tomorrow to be legal, boo!
11 Janelle 03-31-2016 08:47 PM ET (US) IP: 124.168.176.16	Susie, you are right on time, the page is open for posting. I was apologising for the silly comments seeing it is April fools day here.
12 Janelle 03-31-2016 08:49 PM ET (US) IP: 124.168.176.16	 A paler shade, I think

22 Debi Raitz★ 04-01-2016 04:15 AM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	These are all so wonderful so far. Even though I am not into art glass that much, I have always wanted to try and get the three colors (that I know of) of that salt Susie and Janelle showed in #6 and #12. I think someone here has the blue one - maybe you Janelle - and I have also seen an apricot colored one. Susie: Is that a lid for that CANE pattern salt? Does that make it part of a dresser set or a covered salt? I know what it is to us...just wondered if there might be an entire dresser set out there. Does anyone know if there's a book on just dresser sets? Never came across one myself. Someone must collect them. Wouldn't those be lovely to see?
23 Debi Raitz★ 04-01-2016 04:19 AM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	I may have to see all my "spring greenery" here. We are supposed to get snow this weekend. If it was cold enough today all this rain we got today would have been a foot of snow. But it's supposed to get colder tomorrow so we will probably get snow.
24 Susie P★ 04-01-2016 05:14 AM ET (US)	Hi Debi, yes that is a lid, I do think it is a covered salt; I think it is too small to be part of a dresser set, unless it is for rings? And even then, may be too small? And don't know about books on dresser sets, does seem like someone should have done one...☺☺

26 Jytte 04-01-2016 09:19 AM ET (US) IP: 90.184.148.85	 Thanks☺ to Janelle - I have just unpacked this salt - and I know Janelle has a twin (OSC #140) Debi - thought you could use a little of my sunshine - so another type of pic today

New Jonathan Harris with silver cameo. Again, my green/blue confusion, sort of a blue-green. I got this from Linda Kelsey at the 2001 San Francisco convention. She offered them for orders, didn't get enough for an order so I'm glad I bought one of the prototypes.

That's all I have saved on my external hard drive. I'll look around for more later.
At least one other person bought a Harris prototype salt from Linda, don't remember who it was.

39 Nancy C Villaverde★ 04-01-2016 12:31 PM ET (US) IP: 70.119.56.199	 Oops, found two more. Bohemian etch that I bought at the wonderful Brimfield Antiques Fair in Mass. one summer. There weren't many salts, but overall a great vendor display.
40 Nancy C Villaverde★ 04-01-2016 12:35 PM ET (US) IP: 70.119.56.199	 And yes, that's a clumsy glue mend on the stem of the salt below. One of my moving disasters. I need to do the mend over with better glue. This last one is a rare Silveria salt that I sold but kept a photo because it's so rare. I didn't really fancy it so I offered it for sale. It has green lacing on the body.

You ALL got some FINE green salts.
This one is pressed glass in the "Double Wedding Band" pattern by L.G. Wright. Don't see it around much. It is 2 3/8" in Diameter and 1 3/4" High. Available from Wright in five colors and two different colors from Gibson.

I keep hoping I'll find more art glass like it, but they are really scarce out here in the middle of nowhere. Tomorrow I have to make a fast trip to the east side of the state so I've been promised I can go to the antique show, probably will have to skip lunch to do it! Fingers are crossed!! Helped with a garage sale today, and will be doing the same next weekend. Never spent a penny- I'm so proud of myself! Ha

One of my favorite salts, blue cut to clear, is a nut cup. I bought a pair and sold one on ebay back when it was more user friendly. A man emailed me to say his wife had admired it but thought it was too expensive, and he wanted to buy it for her for a Christmas present. He sent a check and I mailed it to a friend's address so she wouldn't know. Can't do that any more.

This bowl and underside of one of, what I call, "grotesques". It is actually a sake cup used in the Spring as a joke. The drinker would see the sweet face and others would see a version of the devil. The chin and horn protrusions serve as the feet of the cup. Perfect salt size. I have several of these, all different.

Many years ago I requested permission to use catalog pages with open salts on them. Kent: I wonder if that yellowish enamel that used to have gold on it has some sort of metal in it that lets gold adhere to it? Like EPNS (nickel), copper and brass will let the silver restorer product adhere? There is also a gold plate product. Wouldn't it be wonderful if that worked on Moser salts? If it didn't adhere there would be no damage to the salt. I only have one salt with most of the gold worn off, but some people like you and Nancy V that have several Moser items might want to give it a try.

One on the right bears the Ruskin scissors mark and can be removed from the silver holder; the one on the left is permanently attached to the silver pedestal, so the mark is covered up. However, I believe both are Ruskin. From what I understand, most of the little Ruskin bowls were made as miniatures but the silver holders for these two made me think salts. The color of the two is almost identical, but the one on the left has more of a lustre finish. Both are about 2 1/2 inches diameter. Edited 04-14-2016 03:50 PM

I see the "Webb flower form" mentioned on salts with this petal shape in the OSC, no registration information. I do have a Peloton salt with these pointy tooled petals. What about the same petal shaped rims on some of the flower shaped pieces on leaf shaped stands? Are they likely to be Webb also?

I contacted a man who was writing a book about Burmese Ware. He confirmed the design and shape and also advised about the registered design of the petals. A number of Webbs pieces are marked with the design but not all and Webb used the design on everything from Vases to bowls to salts etc. I have a bowl, the vase and a number of salts including the ones on leaf bases. This a drawing from Victorian decorative glass but I have also seen a copy of the actual registration.

400 Jytte 04-18-2016 04:37 PM ET (US) IP: 90.184.148.85	Nancy - I don't think we ever get to know - where and when etc - the molds have been used in different countries - so I do think most of my lacy salts are from Europe even if they are in the Neal book as American. I have 3 American lacies and they are in a way different from my others - the glass is thicker - if you hold them in your hands you can clearly see and feel the difference
401 Debi Raitz★ 04-18-2016 08:21 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Jytte: Yes, that last group of green salts I posted are from France. I also got most of them from French sellers. On the subject of Lacies, I think people that collect old American glass are not very interested in the foreign made ones, but look what they are missing. Jytte is lucky to live closer to the countries they were made in and some people do not place much value on them over there. But as salt collectors and not caring where they were made, I think we value them just as much if not more because of all the different colors. Beautiful Jytte, simply beautiful!
