Let's leave out amber because I just discovered we haven't done just amber glass on it's own and we can do that next month. There's a lot of amber glass.

Same salt under black light.

Or maybe this is my favorite. OSC Plate 756.

Old Capstan vaseline salts.

Identified as French, antique canary.

Davidson did a lot of yellow glass that glows beautifully.

Lots of art glass salts have vaseline rigaree or other decorative bits.

	I think this is the only Davidson Vaseline glass I have. I bought it as a salt, but it really is sauce size. I do have a small fan vase that exactly matches it.
31 Nancy C Villaverde★ 09-01-2016 06:09 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	Nancy, I think that's the Alaska pattern sauce dish by Northwood. Color and opal rim exactly match Davidson pieces.
32 Nancy Dietel 09-01-2016 06:23 PM ET (US) IP: 74.105.147.146	You are correct "V", I forgot and thought they were Davidson.
33 Debi Raitz★ 09-01-2016 07:54 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Nancy V: Your #27 looks like a match to the #1910 salt shown on the 1940 catalog page. Says it was made in round and oval shapes. The plain "liner" shapes are there also.

I was accepting that based on color of the glass and the opalescence. I see the plain round as well, very heavy base with deeply pressed multi-rayed pattern. The square is similar. The vaseline glass stand is an old Teaberry Gum store display piece which I use to hold my Fenton nut cups/salts. The one at front right is vaseline. The stand shows much more yellow in real life but glows so brightly when it's photographed.

I apologize for the perfectly awful photo. The salt is in a place too hard to reach, and this picture is cropped from a glass stand with several salts dropped into holes for condiment bottles. This is Northwood Hobnail opalescent, found in white, blue, and canary, both round and square. I'll bet some others here have these sweet little salts. Maybe someone can post a better photo.

Debi Raitz ★ 09-13-2016 03:25 PM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	These are all very pretty and bright. I love the leaf in the salt. Very unique. I don't know how often any of you look at the catalog pages, but I have been adding to them. There's a new image posted for an old Bakewell, Pears & Company catalog that shows some of the salts we might think of as previously unidentified or possibly being French. I also got a much better image of the one shown in H&J with all the pattern names visible. I will try to add/replace it today. Other companies have also had additions. As I find out that Corning has some catalogs in their possession I have been requesting them and actually getting them! Just got a Canton Glass catalog image that I have to add. More confusion on the way folks!

	Love all the animals !!!!!!!!!!! I have the rose one with the embossed name - Not a Sunshine salt unless you want to include a "Baja Sunset" -- But thought I would show the other color for the salt --
133 Debi Raitz★ 09-21-2016 01:55 AM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	Yours is different Mary. It has diamonds. Never realized there was more than one type with that shaded effect.
134 Nancy Dietel 09-21-2016 10:33 AM ET (US) IP: 74.105.147.146	I love Mary's version in #132. Never saw it before. Did some research and found out Rose Tiente began in 1916 and Tiente means tint. It was Baccarat's version of amberina. The pinker shades are the later versions.
135 Mary Kern★ 09-21-2016 11:25 AM ET (US) IP: 72.220.215.254	I realized mine was a different design after I had posted it and was just too lazy to go back in and comment - lol lol Mine appears to have more clear glass within the design also - They are all lovely pieces --
136 Nancy C Villaverde★ 09-21-2016 12:10 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	Love yours, Mary. Mine shades to nearly clear in the bowl and on the foot as it nears the pedestal, but yours looks as if the foot is mostly clear. Pretty, pretty. Mary Kern ★ 09-21-2016 12:51 PM ET (US) IP: 72.220.215.254	 Mine is definitely a cranberry pink color - The glass that looks clear actually has a very timid tint of the color - Not sure where the others are marked - but this one has an embossed name in the bowl -

This salt is very hard to photograph. It is best seen without enlarging. It is a heavy art glass open clamshell. I bought it from Jim & Marlene Nelson many years ago.
