I realized we are going to have to have most beautiful of a certain type, so that lets us post several! First, my overall choice if I had to pick one, most beautiful Moser, green pedestal with gilded and colored enamel floral pattern. Sorry I don't have the matching underplot.

On #2, sorry I didn't notice before posting that auto-correct changed under plate to underplot, which sounds like something sinister in a mystery story. I'd found before that I need to write under plate as two words, not one.
I have picked a most beautiful porcelain salt but have to take a picture.
Someone can easily top mine there I imagine.

I can't take credit for selecting the topic. Nancy V suggested it. But instead of just beautiful salts that would result in showing all art glass again we can show what we consider our most beautiful of all different types, and colors. Even that would be hard to limit to one salt so group pictures are definitely welcome!

14 nancy Villaverde 02-03-2018 03:31 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	I've never seen those fish, probably cry, on an intaglio either. Lovely.
15 nancy Villaverde 02-03-2018 03:34 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	 Most beautiful color on an art glass salt in stand. I'm partial to this one because a very generous English woman gave it to me in this handsome stand when I admired it in her home. She said she had bought it for a few pounds in a neighborhood yard sale and had no particular interest in keeping it. Lucky me! I'd call the color apricot or maybe russet.
16 nancy Villaverde 02-03-2018 03:36 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	 Most beautiful cut-to-clear. The color and design resemble some Moser items in Gary Baldwin's book, but I'm just guessing maker. Purchased in England.

I don't have many beautiful salts, not the type when you see it you would say, "So pretty!". So I will have to go with beautifully rare. I know I've shown this one before in some category but I believe it's museum quality. Made by Theodore Deck who was at one time the director at Sevres in France.

Just for you, Lynda. I hadn't posted it because it's a form match for my first posted Moser in green. This one is complete with under plate. And it has a different decoration. The gilded pattern matches a green one pictured in Gary Baldwin's book on Moser Artistic Glass.

I noticed the similarity in shape with the Lobmeyr too.

Linda, I have that 88 pink tulip as well, beautiful glass also, though more of a satin glass than the cranberry and opalescent. It is definitely a Webb piece. Your 91 is gorgeous.

I found these last few while looking up the green drape salt. I suppose I can keep gong as long as I can keep making up categories. ;->
My most beautiful teeny-tiny salt. This one has a bowl about 1" wide. The color and gilded pattern suggest Moser.

Lynda, the story behind #87 is that we were at a flea market and I'd missed a booth that was tucked between a couple others so I went back to check it out. The girl (she was under 35, so I can call her that) had all kinds of glass, mostly vases, all marked $1. This salt was sitting on the corner, and I was almost afraid to pick it up, I thought I was seeing things. Anyway I tried to offer her more for it, just me being honest, but she said she thought it was an ugly lid to something, and who ever wrote on the bottom ruined it. I told her I thought it was pretty, thanked her, gave her the dollar, and walked away. by the time we got to the truck we were laughing our heads off. Just to show you beauty is in the eye of the beholder.

Linda: Good for you! Bargains are hard to find these days. I have a similar story with my Steuben salt. Got it on eBay for $47.11. I thought it was art glass signed by the artist Dorene. Turned out it was Aurene. Seller obviously did not know it was Steuben, and I didn't either when I bought it. I just thought it was pretty. Glad no one else knew what it was and overbid me.

I also got my "beautifully rare" Theodore Deck salt (shown earlier) on eBay for $54.60. Didn't know it was museum quality at the time. Actually I thought it was an enamel salt for a time. Once I began researching salts I realized who made it. I just wanted the blue and white salt when I bought it.

Lynda, I remember one open salt national convention when people wore salts as jewelry, pins, necklaces, but I don't remember any earrings. Probably too heavy.
This salt is rather common, but the one I have is so beautifully opalescent, and I haven't seen another in such beautiful glass.

As I hunted through salts pictures for this category, I thought of another one, but it probably wouldn't have as many examples. Some salts I looked at could only be called strange, either in shape or decoration. Do we have some strange salts? This month is nearly over though we might go on forever with what we think is beautiful in our collections.

183 nancy Villaverde 02-27-2018 12:25 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	Thanks for the suggestion of trading, Jytte, but I don't know what you might want. I mostly give up only duplicates.
184 Linda H 02-27-2018 03:48 PM ET (US) IP: 174.217.28.120	Nancy, I have several salt spoons made into pins, and two sets of earrings made from salt spoon handles. I bought the earrings as gifts for my grand daughter, who loves the spoons and the art glass salts, but... she got upset that they "ruined" the spoons and refused to take them. I don't wear them often, but they are different

187 Debi Raitz★ 02-28-2018 07:38 AM ET (US) IP: 69.14.123.141	It is hard to figure out new categories where the dozen or so people who post here would have several that fit in. That's why I try not to get too specific. I was going to suggest Easter themed with egg shapes or bunnies but I don't think there's very many of those either. Sitting here thinking...I don't remember if we ever did white milk glass. We all have some of those don't we?
188 Mary 02-28-2018 09:37 AM ET (US) IP: 72.220.215.254	What a beautiful month this has been - Will try and get some pictures today before it ends - but have just enjoyed my morning coffee more because of all your sharing Debi - Might run out of milk quickly - How about white glass or ceramic - Maybe have some color to them - BUT mostly white - Sort of like Wow nice white salt and oh yeah the gold trim is good too - Mostly white would allow more salts rather than limiting it to only milk glass or for that fact glass alone - Whatever you decide I know I will enjoy my morning coffee with the postings
189 nancy Villaverde 02-28-2018 12:47 PM ET (US) IP: 97.99.220.53	Linda, I have a friend who wears several pieces made from silver spoons, not the tiny salt spoons though. I recently bought her a necklace with a drop made from a fancy spoon handle, bowl amputated. Better to "ruin" and repurpose than toss them on the junk pile.

M last contribution for Most Beautiful, saved for last because it's large, may not be a salt. It's one of those tilted bowls, most beautiful carved or etched design in luscious rose glass.

Funny how most of the contributions this month have ben glass rather than pottery or porcelain, or was it to be expected? Is glass naturally more lovely than china?

Almost every topic winds up with more glass shown unless it is one that specifies a particular porcelain or pottery - So I have some that I think are pretty and lean quite a bit to the beautiful side - Such as this Dresden Saxony

Sorry, must have hit the submit button by mistake. Mary, are you thinking about wintering in Florida next year?
You could summer out here in Nebraska if you'd like, oh, wait a minute, it can get hotter than Hades here, maybe that wouldn't be a good idea. Just ask Bob, I'll bet he can remember what its like. You wouldn't want to winter here either.too many cold days

When we were married, 60 years ago, we picked a Reed & Barton silver service pattern. It was called "Autumn leaves". It was simple and had 2 leaves etched in 07:00 AM ET (US) IP: 100.35.122.121	the handles. Dumb me thought everyone got sterling silver for their weddings. Later learned, people got "silver Plate!" Anyway, someone gave me the matching spoon pin. My D-in-Law has the silver service now and uses it for major holidays.

213 Nancy Dietel 03-01-2018 07:08 AM ET (US) IP: 100.35.122.121	 This is the Autumn Leaves pattern. I still have the pin. It is perfect salt spoon size, but I wasn't collecting salts back then. I used to wear it on a sweater in the 50's, early 60's.
214 Mary 03-01-2018 09:03 AM ET (US) IP: 72.220.215.254	I would not mind some snow Linda - Grew up in Toledo and Chicago - Of course my faller downer was much closer to the landing pad than it is now - Nancy V - That was the first convention I went to in San Francisco - They had a couple of costume divisions for the Saturday night entertainment - You wore a pin or two and I had made a necklace of hanging down small pedestal salts with beads - I won in that part - That was also when Carolyn and her mom showed up as the twin pigs with the trough - Brought the house down Maybe we could have a month of spoons - either by themselves or with their matching salts

Linda H., someone once told me that when a bride registered for a silver pattern, she was given a matching pin in the 50's. That didn't happen in my case, someone gave me mine. I don't think I even registered in '58, I think we just made it known and mostly relatives bought the silver.

Don't have many silver salts, but this one is elegant
