Ahhh, Linda H. At sometime in our conversations you said you didn't have a big salt collection. I'd say you have a pretty nice size and diverse collection going.

Jytte: Your donkey is made by Bayel (France) and shown in the catalog but I've never seen a painted one. The Sowerby is on a page that shows salts and novelties, but the salts are not pointed out so it definitely could be one. That teal colored slag is very pretty.

Mary, Elfinware is very interesting. A lot of hand work.....? It looks like the flowers are all hand made and placed. I have no Elfinware. Very interesting to look at. Little art pieces.

Jane, Your sub collection of animal salts is very enjoyable to see. 97-99 has me in envy. I love that salt, another piece of art.

My homecoming was just back to visit this site, Jane. I'd only been away from the computer. I had laser surgery on one eye for secondary cataract, excellent result. I think I's 20/20 in that eye now, first time in my life I haven't needed glasses or contacts. My vision was clear after cataract surgery and lazik treatment but clouded up again with secondary cataracts. I'd never heard of that, but several people in my apartment complex have had the same thing. I'm told about 1 in 4 cataract patients develop those. I need to have the laser treatment on my other eye later, but my vision is very clear with one good eye.

That's great, Nancy! Well, not that you have to have another surgery.

I always used to have such great vision without glasses. Probably too much computer time over the last 20 years. I can still see far away well, just not close up without fuzziness.

Hi All, I enjoy all the baskets and tubs! See MANY that I have, but also see several that I DON'T have. NOT THAT I NEED MORE!! Enjoy your "day off" today! Someone mentioned at Church yesterday, that it's "odd" to wish someone a "Happy Memorial Day", when it's about remembering those that have gone before us! Good point! Don

I've been looking for one like this for a while, wood outside with silver bands and top, china inside. 2 1/4" across, 1 3/8" tall. I'm no expert on what kind of wood it would be.

Well here it is June 1 and I never even thought about a new topic. I've been thinking a lot about Bob and Mary. Our girl has her own difficulties and I am worried for her health too. Everyone please pray for both of them. I'll look through past topics and come up with something today.
