Top Shelf Salts
Top shelf, or top of the line salts. To make it easier to determine "better" salts, let's say whatever salts we think might sell for $50 or more. That would definitely be any Tiffany, Steuben, Quezal, Daum and art glass, but there's a lot more we have that would be worth over $50.

Linda, love your salts. I have your 11 and 14 although I have always maintained they were made by Thomas Webb, not Stuart, as he Registered the design 80167. I have a few pieces of his glass, not only salts where the edge is exactly the same and has been verified as Webb.

41 Janelle 03-02-2019 07:32 PM ET (US)	Linda, would love to see the marks on holder for 38, I maybe able to help? Such pretty salts being shown, ♡♡♡
42 Debi Raitz★ 03-02-2019 07:44 PM ET (US)	Linda H: Your salt in #35 has been discovered to have been made by Campbell, Jones & Co.
43 Debi Raitz★ 03-02-2019 07:50 PM ET (US)	 Art glass with dark cranberry striping. I don't think this one was meant to be in a holder. The rigaree legs touch the table, not the bottom of the salt.
45 Debi Raitz★ 03-02-2019 07:57 PM ET (US)	 Steuben or Webb, not sure. I think it has something to do with the white color.
46 Debi Raitz★ 03-02-2019 07:57 PM ET (US)	 Same as below.

Debi, yes I would think it was by Webb. I have seen a similar petal edge, but they were all much deeper in the Fold and did not have the little dip in between the petals. When you compare them, Webb's edge is very distinctive, and they did take their registered designs very seriously.

Hi Jytte, I am not sure but I was reading in one of my glass books tonight that the double row of pinched glass like on your salt had also been attributed to Webb and often used by his firm. I have not found anything that can prove or disprove this. So it may be a possible

	Webb. Love the colours used in it though.

Mary: It's any salts that would be considered "top shelf" or on the more expensive side. I suppose silver didn't occur to me to include because I just don't have that many. I glanced over at my curio when I was thinking of the glass maker names and there's no silver in there except holders for art glass. Sorry, didn't mean to sound like I was excluding silver. They can be any type of ceramic or pottery too, just have to be "better" ones.

Yes, Nancy I do like the blue one, but I L-O-V-E the Daum! Such an unusual color. A Daum salt is another "maybe some day" salt for me. Wilfred and Dolly had an Debi Raitz★ 03-07-2019 12:06 PM ET (US)	amazing one I fell in love with at a convention long ago. It was deep purple with bright pink fuschia flowers. Never saw another like it.

167 Nancy V 03-07-2019 12:14 PM ET (US)	Debi, I thought it was a good trade, my sale money for something like 20 salts for the one. As if I needed to justify buying a salt! Hi Jytte, you would be much more able to judge that I, but I found information on marks on the silver base. One is a lion rampant on a simple shield, and the other is the letters I F K under what looks like a teapot in a square. I thought I saw it on a site of Danish marks. I need to go back and hunt. Any ideas?

Oh my goodness. I have been drooling and drooling Nancy V. or anyone else. Would love to see any marks that I may be able to help with. Post either on here or send me an email with photo and I will see what I can do.
