Egg Hunt
Any egg shaped salts or the bunnies that bring them on Easter. Might be a bit limited so let's add in cabbage, lettuce and any leaf shaped salts too.

My only true egg salt, and I know I don't have any bunnies. I dropped this one getting it off the shelf and chipped the flowers a little more. It's on Plate 599 in the OSC. The only mark is the number 7115 on the bottom.

Lolololololololololololol, Mary, never tried them frozen but I will now. I don't want or need any different flavor, just the good old al dente marshmallow ones. Like the colors. My son, the big old sheriff's deputy loves them too.

81 Don Rabourn 04-21-2019 08:12 PM ET (US)	While talking about "Peeps", I'll get my "two cents worth in! We love them "crusty", so we poke holes in the box too! I have some boxes in the freezer, that I'm going to make a "Sunflower Cake" with! You make a round cake with chocolate icing, and lay the peeps around the edge(upside down) to form a sunflower. Lay chocolate chips(pointed side up) to look like seeds! Buy them at half-price, after Easter. Good "summer-time" treat! Happy Easter!

91 Nancy V 04-24-2019 02:08 PM ET (US)	 I'd appreciate some help with this odd basket salt. The flower and leaves look like elfin ware, and there is a little child supporting the basket on his back. The figure is well molded all the way around, with his little backside and legs sticking out the back. The base has the four digit number typical of some German pieces, and the initials SPM impressed. KPM I know, but I don't remember SPM.
92 Nancy V 04-24-2019 02:12 PM ET (US)	Mary, thanks for the laugh, not the first you have given me. I burst out with chuckles at the Easter pigs. As a matter of fact, we did have ham on the menu here.
