37 Lynda LaLonde★ 09-04-2020 11:17 AM ET (US) IP: 98.17.13.95	 Holy Cow, Linda has #373 for the project. I missed that. Eagle eye Flegal Debi caught it. Hurrreeaaay. I love how we are gradually finding these missing salts. What a hoot. These greens are breath taking. Joan, stunning salt, elegant. Susie P, I've never seen a little salt with a lid like that. I'm in love. Joan, thank you. I'd say my green pedestal is sister to your blue one. Lol

You know, we really share A LOT of different salts here. So much more than I have ever seen. This site is just wonderful.
Judy, a green Steuben.... be still my heart. The color is beautiful. The set of Bimini, I've only seen pictures... those are small pieces of tiny art. I really like them.

I just thought I'd post a couple last night of pictures I could easily find.
Susie - I'm sure that's Moser - I love it!!!

Lovely salts, Susie. I'd vote no on #95 as Moser. The decorations aren't characteristic of Moser's enameling and gilding. Pretty though.

Love the salts with white lace. I have only a purple one.

I found a few more greenies. Several years ago I found several of these glued-together green glass stands. I sold all with salts displayed on them except this one. On it is a small bohemian style salt.

Linda, cute, sweet, fun to see, maybe not salts but fit in really good.

Lynda, I think your green salt #200 is a Lundberg. Lundberg did make a couple convention salts but this green one was not one of them. It's probably signed Lundberg Studios and a date and/or number.

You are probably right, Debi, but's it's odd that so many salts seem to have made it out of the Lundberg Studios with no marks. I read once that workers sometimes made salts after hours and left them unmarked. No idea if that's true. I've had a few unmarked salts that I was next to positive were Lundberg. I even had one given to me as a gift that was marked L.C.T.

If I am wrong feel free to correct me. Off to do some chores. I was hoping I could play with my salts long enough for it to be too late for a load of laundry. Mary, that's the color I'm missing in my Moser cabochon salts that I showed on the daily chat. I have red, blue, and amber, small and medium sizes. You were close or maybe had a typo with Miser. There are many shapes mimicking this pattern, but you can tell the fakes because the trim around the cabochons are flat gold swirls rather than raised enamel accents. Lots of sets of fakes in glasses on eBay, most listed as Moser.

Great Salts, people! I DO ENJOY seeing them, but my "WANTS" have become "lesser", as I realize HOW MANY I have "packed away" that nobody sees!! I do get a little ENVY, when I see one with the white lace, that I don't have! Oh well! I have made a "BIG DENT" in going through boxes, but I still have our older mini-barn to go through(maybe 100 boxes, some dating back to the 1980's!) That is going to wait until cooler weather, to take place! Stay SAFE ALL!
